

League of Women Voters of New ... Constitution Day in the Bronx

The League Women Voters of New York is passing out free copies of the Constitution to people across New York City during its annual Constitution Day voter drive this is a live look at the distribution in Fordham heights in the Bronx. In addition to passing out copies of the Constitution, the group is also helping people to register to vote. The group is targeting voters as well as city council districts where voter turnout is declining or very low.

Please remember to vote in all elections. And this November, every city council seat will be on the ballot. So it's important that you vote local. That's where you last start right.

There you go. The Constitution Day event continues until two o'clock this afternoon in the celebrations continue all week long WBC TV, a proud partner of the League of Women Voters of New York.
